

HCCC receives $2,500 donation from 'Farmers Grow Communities'

Written by Holyoke Enterprise

Local farmer Alicia Schram has directed a $2,500 donation to the Haxtun Community Childcare Center. Funded by America's Farmers Grow Communities, the donation will help the center purchase needed technology updates. Schram, who helped start the organization, said that the center is an organization very near to her heart.

"The center plans to use the donation to purchase iPads and a smart board, so that we can help further the education of local children through the use of technology," said Julie Thayer, director of HCCC. "The Haxtun Community Childcare Center would like to thank the Schram family and Monsanto for the amazing support they've given to our facility."

To read the full article, subscribe to our e-Edition. Call 970-854-2811.

Holyoke Enterprise February 27, 2014