From Nov. 9-5, students in grades 2-6 participated in a Sumdog.com math contest, competing against other schools in central and northeast Colorado.

During the week of the contest, students answered up to 1,000 math problems and earned one point for each question they answered correctly. During the contest, 285 students participated to answer 81,405 questions correctly.

The Sumdog website quizzes students on math problems from the national Common Core Curriculum. Students practice their math skills by answering math problems while playing games with other students from all across the globe.

Holyoke students won seven of the top 10 positions in the contest. Fourth-grader Tate Dille was in second place with 949 correct answers. Second-grader Cooper Goldenstein was in third place with 916 correct, second-grader Elise Krogmeier fourth with 909 and second-grader Jimena Nuñez sixth with 891.

Fourth-grader Ashley Rahe scored seventh place with 891, third-grader Cade Killin ninth with
