

Joe Kinnie in commissioner race; Roll Walters withdraws

Written by Brenda Johnson Brandt

Expecting to take a vote for their District One Commissioner candidate, Phillips County Republicans were in for a surprise at the March 27 County Assembly when incumbent Susan Roll Walters withdrew from the race.

As a result, Joe Kinnie was chosen as the sole candidate to represent the party on the Republican Primary Election ballot in August.

Kinnie had just made his intent to seek election known a week earlier and is dedicated in his pledge to serve the county.

Roll Walters told the gathered Republicans she has had a great eight years in office, the Republicans have a good candidate and she has other things she can do. She added she believes in term limits.

Roll Walters said she will still serve on her community-appointed boards including Eastern Colorado Services for the Developmentally Disabled and Baby Bear Hugs.

Other nominations approved

Four incumbents for county office were unopposed in their re-election intent and all were chosen to represent the party. This includes Beth Cumming, County Clerk; Linda Statz, County Treasurer; Doug Kamery, County Assessor; and Rob Urbach, County Sheriff.

There were no Republican candidates nominated for either County Surveyor or County Coroner.

Two resolutions passed

Two resolutions brought forward by precinct one were passed by the assembly.

Resolution 1 touts a belief in the American capitalistic, private, competitive enterprise system; opposes legislation that would allow public access to or through private property without permission of the property owner; and opposes any regulations that encroach on the rights of private property owners.

Resolution 2 notes the Republican party has long stood for constitutional and founding principles, and seeks a return to the basic natural laws and freedoms.

It emphasizes the framers of the U.S. Constitution believed that a government elected from the citizens to represent themselves and hold their liberties sacred from a tyrannical abuse of power was the best form of government.

Candidates address assembly

Several officials and candidates or their representatives addressed the county assembly Saturday.

Jerry Sonnenberg spoke for himself and for Ken Buck who is running for U.S. Senate. Greg Brophy spoke for himself and for Scott McInnis, running for Governor.
